Lounge armchair with curved wooden frame. Grillo is defined by the contrast between the structure, the paws, dynamic and characterized by stretched curves and counterposed arches, gathering with the seat in between, juxtaposed. The thermo curved wooden element, without ever changing its section but only through calibrated torsions, creates the foot, the armrest and the backrest as a unique line moving through the space. The contrast between the colors and the materials is the main aesthetic feature of this collection.

Poltroncina lounge con struttura in legno curvato. Grillo è caratterizzato dal contrasto tra la struttura, le zampe, dinamica e caratterizzata da curve tese ed archi contrapposti che si incontrano e la seduta che vi si inserisce come giustapposta. Il nastro in lamellare termocurvato, senza mai cambiare la propria sezione ma solo attraverso delle calibrate torsioni, crea in continuità prima il piede, poi il bracciolo e lo schienale come un unico segno che si muove nello spazio. Grande valenza estetica ha il contrasto, con cui si può giocare, tra il colore e la caratterizzazione materica degli elementi in legno e di quelli imbottiti.

“We envisaged the thermally curved laminated strip as a form which, without ever altering its cross-section – but solely through carefully calibrated twists – continuously forms first the base, then the armrest and the backrest, as a single gesture moving through space.”

Aldo Parisotto (Monselice, 1962) graduated from IUAV Venice under James Stirling, and taught interior design in Trieste from 2001 to 2003. Massimo Formenton (Padova, 1964) also graduated from IUAV in 1989. Together they founded Parisotto+Formenton studio in Padova in 1990, with a Milan base added in 2004. Their work spans architecture (museums, commercial spaces and residential buildings, including the recent restoration of Milan's historical Ricordi palace) and 360° retail design for major fashion and luxury brands (Salvatore Ferragamo, Eleventy, Testoni, Vic Matié, among others). They are also behind the Nespresso boutique concepts worldwide, alongside significant collaborations in lighting and furniture design.
